

Advocate Aurora Research Institute

At Advocate Aurora Research Institute, part of Advocate Health, we're transforming care to improve health and quality of life across the entire life span, from infants to older adults. Helping people live well through research is our primary focus.

We support hundreds of unique research projects, including groundbreaking clinical trials that give our patients access to innovative treatment options that otherwise wouldn't be available to them. Our success in translating scientific research into more effective care and prevention strategies is strengthening the communities we're privileged to serve and garnering national attention.

The Research Institute is also a valued partner of many industry sponsors, academic and life science collaborators, and other research organizations.
